responsiveness

functionality

usability

compatibility with multiple browsers

Rick's portfolio is not responsive for smaller screens, as soon as the screen gets smaller, images and paragraphs of text tend to clutter which makes it unresponsive. Vine's portfolio is responsive on every screen size.

Both websites serve a great functionality. Even though there isn't much functionality involved in a portfolio website, there are no loading issues or broken links.

Usability is present in both portfolios. The elements are displayed in a clear and concise manner so the user does not get confused.

Last but not least, both websites have a compatibility with multiple browsers, regarding if you are a mac user and you use safari, the content is visible too.
